For Immediate Release:

Worst of storm conditions expected Wednesday night

MARATHON, FL (Nov. 25, 2026) – The National Weather Service warned of multi-hazard weather conditions through the early evening hours of Wednesday, Nov. 25, with an increased chance of severe thunderstorms and an isolated tornado or two for the Middle and Upper Keys.

Some of the thunderstorms could produce wind gusts of 60 to 70 mph, according to NWS.

Coupled with the storms is the potential for excessive rainfall, possibly as much as 5 to 7 inches in isolated areas, and minor to moderate coastal flooding because of the King Tide.

Through 8 a.m. Wednesday, observations and radar estimates of 1.5 to 5.5 inches of rain had fallen throughout the Florida Keys overnight, with the heaviest totals in the Conch Key and Long Key/Layton areas.

Additional widespread rainfall of 1½ to 3 inches were most likely to fall through Wednesday night in the Florida Keys.

Marathon is expected to experience moderate flooding bayside from 9 p.m. Wednesday to 5 a.m. Thanksgiving morning, and again from 11 p.m. Thursday to 3 a.m. Friday.

Poor drainage area streets may become temporarily impassable, along with a few periods of general poor drainage yard and parking lot flooding.
